The Association for Canadian Studies in the United States (ACSUS) is pleased to announce the 2024 competition for the Enders/ ACSUS 50 Research Award. With the generous support of the Thomas O. Enders Endowment, the award honors the 50th anniversary of ACSUS and is granted biennially to support a U.S.-based scholar whose current research or creative project promises to make a significant contribution to the field of Canadian Studies. Researchers from all disciplines in the field are encouraged to apply. Among the subjects of special interest are energy policy, economics, cross-border issues, and climate change and the environment. Projects may include books or book chapters, scholarly articles, short films/documentaries, works of creative writing, and databases/websites relating to the digital social sciences and humanities, among other scholarly and creative endeavors. Award amount: $15,000.

The deadline for applications for the 2024 Enders/ACSUS 50 Research Award is December 1, 2024. Applicants will be notified of the results of the competition by December 15, 2024. A final report of the research that was supported by the award is due on December 1, 2025. This funding can cover only the direct costs of research (not university overhead costs) and will be paid to the successful researcher directly.
